In the far northeastern part of China (Manchuria), the well-known 1900-km long Song Hua Jiang flows through the heartland of Manchuria. Originating in the Ever-White Mountain region near the Sino-Korean border, it passes through a village in Kirin Province where my parents were born. My father was truly a Manchurian while my mother was a Han. They gave life to me so I could write this autobiography Song Hua Jiang and share my story with you, my readers. My tale starts in 1946, soon after the end of World War II, when as a little boy, I travelled home from Beijing to Manchuria with my mother and sister. The civil war in Manchuria between Chinese Nationalists and Communists had just begun and I saw the fighting first hand. I will describe in Part I of the book the war wounds and the rubbles left as well as the atrocities committed by the Russian troops in Manchuria. As the civil war heated up and accelerated subsequently, like a rolling thunder at unbelievable speed, the Nationalists were defeated in 3 years. As a result, we all had to flee the mainland to Taiwan in haste. Details of our escape from the Reds as well as seeing the emotional suffering experienced by our relatives when they realized that the separation meant there will be no hope of seeing each other again will also be told. My story also includes our years in Taiwan. After finally settling in Taiwan, we were able to enjoy relative peace for the first time in a number of years. This period of my life was sweet as I grew up and developed into a young man and met and fell in love with my future wife. However,...
